oned trappers, whose supply of food was judged, was almost gone. The St. Paul never returned

After a delay of two mouths an other schooner was sent out for the sland, and with orders to search for the St. Paul or news of her. This second craft, also, has disappeared. overwhelmed, it is thought, in one of the violent storms that raged for several days after her departure.

Then a small steamer was supplied with provisions and started out, but a short distance at sea she became isabled and returned to port Spinew. Husbor, where she has been mice under repair.

Meanwhile friends of the four trap ers in Squaw Harbor and Unga be ame francis; with the thought of their old compades alone for over a year on the barren island, with food enough o last them but a few months, and the achooner Hunter had gone to make the fourth attempt to rescue the men. It is hoped that the trappers will be able to kill snough foxes on the island to supply them with food, but as the is small it is found that they idlied off all the animals in the first ten months of their imprisonment, be fore it became apparent to them that heir supplies were not to arrive on

To Raze a Big Indian Mound

West Virginia Man Says Sentiment Can No Longer Save It.

Monndiscrife, W. Va.- D. F. McPad den; who owns the historic imound here erected by the race antestating the indians, and which gave the place its name, announces that sentimental considerations are no longer adequate to prevent him from removing that pile of earth and its contents to give place to modern improvements.

Several years ago McFadden was could not afford to allow the property about 75 feet high to remain in its present shape, paying taxes upon it and gelling no returns passe for purchasing the mound have been suggested but no definite steps have been taken and now McFadden aunounces he will start to remove the mount orders be is given positive assurance that it will be purchased from him at a fair price

When the work of remarkal starts. if it does, it is expected that the bone if many human beings together with implements and atensils of the Mound tempted to cut the property up into Builders, will be disclosed.
